Estabrook's

PACHYVERIA DRACO

LIGHT

Give this rosette succulent very bright light, with direct sun introduced gradually. A sunny window or suitable grow light helps maintain compact growth. Sudden strong outdoor sun can scorch indoor-grown leaves.

WATER

Water thoroughly until excess leaves the drainage hole, then let the potting mix dry fully before watering again. Do not use small daily sips or misting as a watering routine.

SOIL & PLANTING

Use a container with drainage holes and a gritty succulent mix. Set the rosette above the mix rather than burying the lower leaves. Avoid oversized pots that remain wet long after watering.

FEEDING

Feed lightly only during active growth, using a succulent fertilizer at its labeled rate. Skip feeding when growth is slow. More fertilizer will not correct a stretched plant caused by inadequate light.

SEASONAL CARE

Keep indoors through Maine winters and move outdoor summer plants in before cold nights or frost. Reduce watering as growth and light decline. Remove dry lower leaves gently without pulling healthy leaves from the stem.

HELPFUL TIPS

The powdery coating on the leaves is protective natural wax; avoid rubbing it off. Handle by the pot because fleshy leaves can detach. This guide is for the identified Draco cultivar, not every plant sold as an assorted succulent.
